Advanced Rescue & Survival School

January 6-8, 2021

The NRC Advanced Rescue & Survival School is a three day program designed for firefighters and company officers who desire a high paced, data-driven, and realistic training program focused on self-rescue, firefighter survival, aggressive and proactive RIT/RIC operations, maintaining situational awareness, and understanding the psychology and physiology of a firefighter mayday.

This School condenses and replicates the extreme demands that may be placed on firefighters at any scale incident. Emphasis is placed on the challenges that all firefighters will face when involved or responding to an emergency mayday. The same principles being taught here can be applied to improve your individual and team's performance of duties at any small- or large-scale incident, natural disasters, catastrophic events, or acts of terrorism.

This Program is the most physically and mentally challenging course offered by National Rescue Consultants. Its design allows each student to understand, manage, and challenge their physical and psychological limitations in a safe, stressful, and realistic environment. This coupled with constant situational awareness drills and forced consequential decision-making scenarios, assures that the student gains condensed lifesaving experience and therefor can operate more efficiently at any emergency incident. The NRC Advanced Rescue & Survival School is taught and designed by a very seasoned Fire Service Instructor Cadre and continually updated to stay on the leading edge of firefighting technology, equipment, safety, and survival.

Lead Instructors: Rob Ramierz, Greg Rogers, Timmy Gleason
